WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4. 1741

Nasitur ridiculus Mus.

Jupiter vult perdere prius dementat.

INSOLENCE even in a Conqueror was ever condemn'd in the Judgment of all Disinterested and Sensible Men; but before a Victory, or in those that are vanquish'd, 'tis still more ridiculously odious, as foolish as it is base and impotent; yet has the malignant Faction against the present Government given us an Example of the former highest Degree of Extravagance: They, with-lush, sung their Triumph before they enter'd d; they were loud in their Paeans to them-before they had given one Wound to their An-Every Chief among them had harangu'd not Band, and the imagin'd Triumph sparkled Eye; every Thought was swell'd with fancy'd ; the Republican already seem'd trampling beneath him: What dire Mortification! what de Disappointment ensu'd, I need not menow blank, how pale, how Crest fallen, how may'd and undone every Warrior look'd on at, I need not describe, the World are Judges. ly curious to enquire whether the Hockley Hole of Patriotism would not sing a Te Deum upon throw of all his Party, as a late neighbouring was wont to do whenever his Armies were and from the Opinion I had of the Honesty esty of this Writer, I thought my Expectation ppable: I therefore sent for the Champion of February 14. and own I was for the first Time ted in him; instead of a Te Deum, and a Song oph, I met with a most doleful Lamentation lost Condition of Modern Patriots: Yet let ld utterly despair, and do as Achitophel did, ere was great Reason to expect, their Cham- comforts them, that there is still a lucky Ex- be found, by reading our own Histories, ay revive their drooping Spirits: But this Ex- he says, is of such a Nature as is not safely to d, tho' it may be learn'd with Safety.

hence it is evident, that this Lucky Expedient propos'd to be the Dernier Resort of the Faction e Government, cannot be of a very good Na-cause it is, they say, unsafe to explain it. If Thing agreeable to the Laws and Constituit be consistent with the Rights and Privileges men; if it be just in its own Nature, and bene-Design; it cannot be unsafe to explain it: make it unsafe? Is not the Law Supreme ? Can the lowest Wretch in Britain be hurt cing any Expedient for the Publick Service, will protect him in it; if it be not inconth the Laws? Can any Power oppress him Law, or against Law? Every Man knows the to guess then at this Scheme of Darkneps, quently of Iniquity; for Patriotism and Virtue and the Light: And here I tremble to think om the Author has given us to discover his Expedient. He need not to have sent us to Histories to learn more Lessons of Assassination, thought it insufficient to have pointed out him-most flagrant Example of all. There is, says opion of modern Patriots, a lucky Expedient to out, to be with Safety learn'd, but not with lain'd. Well, What would this signify to his if they did not know what this lucky Expe- ? But he has taken effectual Care that they be at any Loss on this Account: 'Tis their s, he tells them, they have not got rid of the they complain of; and puts it in Italicks, left ld miss the Instruction, for them to remember on of Butchery and Murder; this emphatical on to stab and assassinate from the Mouth of a who enforce'd it by his own Example on a eater and better Man than himself, is deliver'd ure of present Instruction, as a Doctrine of Patriotism, as the honest Opening of their real s, and as the proper Introduction of a serious on to the Patriots, to fly and have recourse to an Expedient, that cannot be with Safety explain'd. I don't doubt but our Champion himself thought it would be too glaring, to have plac'd this Lesson of Assassination from the Roman Cassius immediately after his lucky Expedient that might be safely learn'd and not safely explain'd; and I really think it was no less daring, or wicked, to propose the horrid Advice at all, and much more so in one and the same Paper, where its Design could not be mistaken. And whatever this wicked Incendiary may imagine, Britons are not yet so corrupted, either by himself or any of his Co-workers in the Recommendation and Defence of the Cause of Butchery and Murder, as to believe in the Patriotism of Assassinations, or to think of such Monsters without the utmost Abhorrence and Detestation.

To this righteous Indignation, this just Abhorrence in the Breast of every Man, I leave this assassinating Champion; such a Monster surely need only to be shewn to be hated and treated as he deserves, in a Country where Liberty is every Man's Inheritance, and the Protection of the Laws his most invaluable Birthright; where every Man has a Right to Safety till he forfeits it by the Laws of his Country; and where every Assassin is a Traitor to the Constitution, as well as to the eternal Law of God: If such is Modern Patriotism, to set up Violence instead of Law, and to make Obedience to the Laws bring no Security to the Well-behaved; our Constitution cannot have a worse Dagger plunged in its Vitals; if such be Modern Patriots, Oh, my Soul, come not into their Secret, unto their Assemblies mine Honour be thou never united.

I have nothing further to add at present with regard to this Champion, because I find I shall not now have Room to examine his whole Paper as I at first design'd; but that I defy him to shew that I have been mistaken in the Account I have taken from himself of the lucky Expedient which he cannot with Safety explain.

For to pretend that he means only an Association of the Populace, against the Government of their Country, against their Sovereign, and both Houses of Parliament, will be idle and ridiculous; for if an Association cannot be explain'd to them, how in the Name of Wonder shall they associate? Besides, will such an Explanation of his lucky Expedient extenuate at all the Guilt of this Modern Catiline? Tho' such an Association might be free from the inhuman Baseness of personal Assassination, it would have with it all the Guilt of Treason and Rebellion; and Association against King, Lords, and Commons, against Legal Administration, and Constitutional Government, would be, tho' not personal Assassination, if possible, more horrid in its Nature, certainly, more universally fatal in its Consequences; it would be an Attempt to butcher the Constitution, a Treason (as a great Patriot observ'd) of an eternal Nature, that continues in Act through all Generations; to the Champion then I shall only say on this Occasion, utrum horum major accipe.

I shall conclude with congratulating my Countrymen on that general Satisfaction which prevails among us, and which almost every Man express'd upon seeing himself and the whole Nation convinced, that we have nothing to fear from those who take a Delight to cast an Odium upon a Government, or blast a Reputation, upon Suppositions only of Things that never have been, or what only may be, instead of Evidence of Fact; who cast Firebrands, Arrows and Death, and say, am I not in Sport? who would censure from Prejudice only, and have their own Envy be substituted in the Room of Proof; who pretend not to prove any thing, but would have Accusation pass for Guilt, even the Accusation of avow'd personal Resentment, and long-declared Malice; I rejoice, I say, with my Countrymen, that it is apparent, from such Men we have nothing to fear, while the Law is supreme in Britain, and a Man must be prov'd an Offender before he can suffer as one; this is our Birthright, this our Constitution, and where a Parliament is the faithful Palladium of this Inheritance, Faction may foam, may rage and roar like the Sea, but it shall not overwhelm us; for as it was justly observ'd by a late ingenious Writer, 'When a Prince at the Head of Affairs proposes wise Ends, and pursues steady Measures; whose Soul knows no Fear, as it designs no Wrong; conscious of upright Designs, and unshaken in right Purposes; unmoved by the Insolence of lesser Persons, or Presumption of the Greatest; who quite discountenances the little Arts of Slander and Insinuation; who is served by wise and faithful Ministers, and with Decency and Respect; then the publick Affairs prosper, the Honour of a Nation flourish es; there will be Scope for Panegyrick without Flattery, the exactest Criticism will be the greatest Compliment, and all true Censure be turned into just Praise.'

MISO CASSIUS.

Yesterday arriv'd a Mail from Flanders.

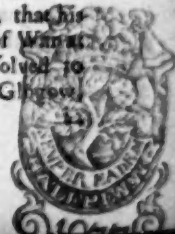

Stockholm, Feb. 21. N. S.

AS the King was hunting t'other day in this Neighbourhood, a Person of Distinction that was in his Retinue mistook his Majesty's Coachman for a Deer, and shot him dead on the Spot. The Texts given out for the four Days of Fasting, &c. (mention'd in our last) are Isaiah xlv. 21, 22. for the 10th of April; Psal. xxxvii. 2. for the 22d of May; Philippians ii. 14, 15. for the 19th of June; and Isaiah xii. 1, 2. for the 18th of September.

Vienna, Feb. 25. N. S. Mr. Robinson the British Minister having receiv'd an Express from his Court with Dispatches relating to certain Overtures that have been made for an Accommodation between the Queen of Hungary and the King of Prussia, has not only had a private Audience of the Great Duke but a Conference with the Counts de Sintzendorf and Staremberg, and a Council has also been held thereupon, from the Result of which we cannot yet prognosticate any thing certain for an Accommodation, since the Queen persists in her Demand that the King of Prussia first withdraw his Forces from Silesia, as a Preliminary without which her Majesty thinks there can be no treating with Success. Amongst the Duke d'Uzeda's Papers there have been found two Letters from him, which are so mysteriously worded, that they give Ground for Reflection. In one of 'em 'tis said, 'Matters ripen insensibly, but to bring them to full Maturity, 'tis necessary to act powerfully; another way, and not to neglect what gives Credit.' What is taken particular Notice of in the other is this Expression; 'The Affair of Silesia creates such a Stir, that it may contribute very much to advance the Design in hand. The greater is the Ferment, the more certain seems the Success. There is Reason also to depend on the Success of the Means put in practice to keep up the Spirits of the People, it being of the utmost Importance to hinder them from cooling.' One thing which throws some Light upon these ambiguous Expressions is, the Sums which the Duke d'Uzeda has received from several Places and from different Bankers, some of whom having been sent for to Court, and examin'd, have made it appear that the Money was remitted by the way of Genoa. Among the Duke's Papers have likewise been found several Letters from Don Carpentero, who resided here as Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, which are all couch'd in figurative and allegorical Expressions. There were moreover some Tables of Cyphers with the Keys, and the rough Draught of a Memorandum in the Italian Tongue, wherein 'tis said, 'As it may happen that more than one may miscarry, and 'tis proper to take Measures against every Event, and to prepare the Batteries.' The Duke has not only made a Discovery of several Persons, who were immediately apprehended, but has alſo declared that he made use of a private Gentleman at Genoa, whose Name is Corradini, to send his Letters to Spain. General Brown is posted with his Troops between Brunn and Almutz, where he proposes to stay till he is so well reinforced as to be able to act against the Prussians. 'Tis certain that the Velt Marshal de Neuperg will have the chief Command in Silesia, and that the Court has already paid him 300000 Florins for the Military Chest. The Turkish Ambassadors here always goes abroad with near 100 Persons in his Retinue, of whom there are always 20 or 30 that play on divers Instruments, which make a roaring Concert.

Dresden, Feb. 26. On the 24th instant Baron Jaxheim, Envoy Extraordinary from the Queen of Hungary, arrived here, and Yesterday had a private Audience of the King: To-day he sets out for Hanover. Orders have been given for 20000 Men to get in Readiness to march by the End of next Month; when it will be signified to them what Route they are to take. For the EYES,

The so-much Fam'd CHYMICAL

WHICH at once infallibly

INFLAMMATION, BLOODSHOT, SORROWFULNESS of the EYES, Defluxions of sharp Humours, Sight, Specks, Films, or beginning Cataracts, and all other Means have fail'd, and without causing Trouble or Uneasiness in using.

LONDON, March 2.

We hear from Newbury, that a few Days ago one May of that Town, a foolish Sort of a Fellow, who had gone from his Mother about a Fortnight before, no Body knew where, was discover'd in a Sort of a Cave he had dug in a Wood, where he had liv'd all that Time on nothing but wild Roots and other Vegetables, but when he was brought home, and refresh'd with other Food, he died immediately.

There is an Account from Kingston, of a most barbarous Murder committed near that Town, on a Farmer's Wife who was going to London in the Waggon; but happening unfortunately to alight, to walk over the Fields in a Foot-Way that led into the Road again at a considerable Distance, she was set upon by four Ruffians, who used her in a cruel Manner. The Waggoner coming to the Place where the Foot-way join'd the main Road, stay'd a long Time expecting her to come; but at last seeing two Men a shooting, and suspecting something more than ordinary to have happen'd, he prevail'd on them to go with him in search of her; and when they came near the Place where she was murder'd, the Dogs discover'd her by the Scent of the fresh Blood, and then two of the Villains were stripping her of her Cloaths. This Barbarity so provok'd the Gentlemen, that one of them discharg'd his Gun at the Ruffians, and mortally wounded one of them, and forced the other to surrender, who immediately discover'd his Accomplices; and they were all taken, and committed to the County Gaol.

To the Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Surry.

Gentlemen,

I Find myself under a Necessity of contradicting in this Manner a Report too industriously spread in the Country, That I decline offering myself as a Candidate at the future Election; I do assure you it is without foundation, and that I still depend on the Affection of my Country, that I may have the Honour to represent it, as my Ancestors have done. And I beg that every Gentleman, whom my private Affairs or my Health will permit me personally to wait on, will kindly accept of my Application from

Gentlemen.

Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

To the GAZETTEER.

Friend of mine was so pleas'd with a humorous Print publish'd last Summer, representing the Craftsman turn'd Tinker, that, being then in the Country, his Muse dictated a Ballad to him, which he intituled the Tinker turn'd Politician, or Caleb's Metamorphosis; and which I hear will soon be publish'd Miscellany, with some Improvements.
Leave I send you these Stanzas of it for your present Entertainment.

Island of Britain, an Isle of great Fame, once liv'd a Tinker, and Caleb his Name; his Tools, and so nice was his Stroke, Artists besides he out-did, and he broke—

Derry down, &c.

Man but he, did his Work understand, as quite finish'd that came from his Hand; did what most Tinkers are wont for to do, Hole that he mended, he always made two.

Derry down, &c.

Cost him little for any Design, Metal, 'twas seldom he troubled the Mine; want he needed to find him in Brass, never he wanted he took from his Face.

Derry down, &c.

With his Trade, his Profession he hates, patching of Pans, falls to mending of States; not so keen as the Journals he writ, nothing like Starving to make you a Wit.

Derry down, &c.

Tinkering-Scribe with the Dash of his Quill, Help of a Reason, can prove what he will;
Essay each Week, that the Law doth defy, when he pleases, can tinker a Lye.

Derry down, &c.

Take his Advice, the new Statesman with Ease out a War, or can plan out a Peace. he can prove them a Blessing or Curse, peace shall be bad, yet a War shall be worse.

Derry down, &c.

If you may read a new Patriot each Week, much better than any from Latin or Greek; the Breast of his St. John is grac'd with a Star, Head is not yet to be seen on the Bar.

Derry down, &c.

Is his Sword, and his Spurs, and his George, th'd quite nice at the Tinker's own Forge; the Artist was out, as most Heralds agree, instead of his Neck, ty'd the String to his Knee.

Derry down, &c.

Quiet, and Fighting, by turns he is vext, at faves us this Summer, shall sink us the next; in the Morning—'tis better at Noon; Wisdom in May, shall be Madness in June.

Derry down, &c.

Wrong in Sir R—e to suffer our Foe, from the West, a whole Summer to blow, kept not the Winds, like the Sen—te in Pay, both the Fleet and Sir John from Torbay.

Derry down, &c.

—e! if you find any Weakness or Flaws, schemes of your Closet, or Frame of your Laws, taker, to shew you his Wit is not small, Sodder he makes ye, can close 'em up all.

Derry down, &c.

With a Hammer, his Genius is still full, full of Busby, with Ink and a Quill; every Profession, or Statesman, or Quack, much better pleas'd that his Work should be black.

Derry down, &c.

Tricks you still like, you may have him agen, as nothing now left him to sell—but his Pen; the Foe for a Guinea, you may steal him away, fights, like a Switzer, alone for the Pay.

Derry down, &c.

Write (which he hates) he will prove what you will; you're sure of his Heart, if his Pocket you fill; the Senate, and King, shall their Duty discharge, their Schemes shall be wife, if his Pay is but large.

Derry down, &c.

LONDON, March 2.

We hear from Newbury, that a few Days ago one

There is an Account from Kingston, of a most barbarous Murder committed near that Town, on a Farmer's Wife who was going to London in the Waggon; but happening unfortunately to alight, to walk over the Fields in a Foot-Way that led into the Road again at a considerable Distance, she was set upon by four Ruffians, who used her in a cruel Manner. The Waggoner coming to the Place where the Foot-way join'd the main Road, stay'd a long Time expecting her to come; but at last seeing two Men a shooting, and suspecting something more than ordinary to have hap-pen'd, he prevail'd on them to go with him in search of her; and when they came near the Place where she was murder'd, the Dogs discover'd her by the Scent of the fresh Blood, and then two of the Villains were stripping her of her Cloaths. This Barbarity so pro-vok'd the Gentlemen, that one of them discharg'd his Gun at the Ruffians, and mortally wounded one of them, and forced the other to surrender, who immediately discover'd his Accomplices; and they were all taken, and committed to the County Gaol.

We hear from Round-Oak in the Parish of Ufton, that a Cow had lately calv'd there, which besides its Calf brought forth a Monster that had a Face like an human Creature, with an Hare-lip, a Tooth in the Mouth, one Ear, and one Arm, but no Legs; the lower Part of the Body being like a Calf, and hairy: Which is now in the Possession of Thomas Bushnell, at Sullamstead near Theale in Berkshire.

Within a Fortnight past there have been 16 Felons committed to the County Gaol for Berks; and it will be the greatest Assize at the Crown Bar that has been lons in Custody and out upon Bail.

Last Week the Right Hon. the Earl of Stamford gave lain to the Earl of Radnor, to hold the Rectory of Redwlyn, in the County of Anglesey and Diocese of Bangor, together with the Rectory of Aberfwr, in the County and Diocese aforesaid.

Yesterday Morning a Boat wherein were three Persons coming to Market with Lampers Eels, was overset between Fulham and Wandsworth; by which unhappy Accident they were all drown'd.

ment of Foot-Guards, were severely whipp'd on the N. B. Notice is taken of an extraordinary private Letter from Cork in Ireland inserted in the Daily Advertiser of Tuesday last, and from thence copy'd in some of the Evening posts, which represents that Country in the most miserable Condition that Want, and even a Famine can plunge it. And this melancholy Account is the more surprizing, because there's no such Advice in any of the printed Papers from Ireland, but rather repeated Accounts of the Arrival of Corn and Flour at Cork and other Ports of Ireland, from our Colonies in America: So that 'tis shrewdly suspected the said Letter (which, by the way, is dated above a Month ago) is founded upon much the same Authority, and published to serve the same Purpose as the Paragraph in a late Daily Advertiser from the West of England, which confidently asserted that the Poor in that Part of England were forced to eat
